

February 2, 2015

The Soundcheck Blog

Buster Poindexter, Live In The Greene Space

This event is over. An audio and video archive will be posted shortly.

Monday, February 02, 2015 - 07:00 AM

Buster Poindexter. (Mara Hennessey/Courtesy of the artist)

Buster Poindexter is the lounge-lizard alter-ego of David Johansen, one of rock's most influential singers. After founding the seminal glam-punk band The New York Dolls, and beginning a successful solo career, Johansen unveiled his Buster Poindexter character in the mid-1980s -- and you've been dancing to his version of "Hot Hot Hot" at weddings ever since.

Poindexter has been known to sing pop standards, novelty songs, classic rock 'n' roll, and old blues. But his upcoming two-week residency at the Café Carlyle, which runs Feb. 10-21, also includes a Valentine's Day show; So it's perhaps a safe bet that the pompadoured crooner will have a love song or two in store, as well.

February 2, 2015

In a special sneak preview of his Carlyle shows, Buster Poindexter and his band join us for a special Soundcheck Pop-Up session and interview at WNYC's own Greene Space.

Buster Poindexter: a
Soundcheck Pop-Up
Concert

Event ended Feb, 2 2015 3:30 PM EST

A white rectangular button with a play icon on the left and the text "WATCH AGAIN" on the right.A black and white portrait of Buster Poindexter wearing sunglasses, with a WNYC Soundcheck logo in the top left corner.

livestream

More on livestream.com →