

April 24, 2015

'The Joe D Show' Episode 7: Actress Megan Hilty on her new show at Cafe Carlyle, 'Smash,' Broadway and babies

BY JOE
DZIEMIANOWICZ

Follow

Episode 7 of “The Joe D Show” welcomes Megan Hilty, who’s known for roles on Broadway in “Wicked” and “9 to 5” and the NBC series “Smash.”

We talk about her upcoming Cafe Carlyle show, running May 19-30, which, she says, has just “changed direction.” She’s focusing on “Smash” music and weaving in a few songs that have meaning for her as a mom. She and her husband, Brian Gallagher, have a 7-month-old daughter, Viola.

MICHAEL WILHOITE

Megan Hilty in her 2014
debut the Cafe Carlyle.

We also talk babies, Tony Awards fever (who the heck is hosting this year, anyway?), a possible return to Broadway in a play (if an ABC pilot she filmed doesn’t get picked up) and what’s special about working with music director Matt Cusson, who, she says, “doesn’t read a note of music.”

Make sure to find us on iTunes (<http://apple.co/1xmnrYx>) and subscribe for more episodes. You can get in touch with me on twitter at @TheJoeDShow and find more articles, reviews and theater news at nydailynews.com

This podcast is edited by Frank Posillico and produced by me.